Jodi K. Miller

Jodi Miller is a member of the firm's Litigation/ADR Department and Health Law Practice Group and focuses her practice on commercial and other civil litigation. She has handled a wide variety of litigation in federal and state jurisdictions throughout the country in matters involving antitrust, health law, products liability, real estate, corporate law, consumer fraud and protection, financial laws and regulations, and civil rights. Jodi has conducted an internal investigation of a multi-national corporation, and has represented public and privately-held corporations, financial institutions, universities, non-profits and individuals in a range of matters. She also has extensive experience representing plaintiffs and defendants in numerous class action litigations.

Related Professional Experience

Prior to joining the firm, Jodi was a senior staff attorney for a national child advocacy organization working to reform failing child welfare systems throughout the country. She also practiced in the New York City and San Francisco offices of a large international law firm for nine years. In 2001-2002, Jodi served as a law clerk to the Honorable Eduardo C. Robreno, U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and, while in law school, she was the executive articles editor for New York University School of Law's Annual Survey of American Law.
